Peety's Joy

Watercolor on Arches cold press paper

Artist's Statement

I chose to paint a depiction of Peety's excitement at his first sight of the pond and ducks. It was one of their first long walks in the park and they were both thrilled at being able to do it. I tried to capture the motion of the dog and ducks in their exuberance to get moving. Peety to get into the water and the ducks to get away.

Artist's Bio

I have been painting in watercolor for over twenty years and continually take classes and have taken many workshops from nationally recognized art teachers. I live in Stayton, Oregon with my wife Judy who is also a watercolor artist.

My exhibitions include the Village gallery in Cedar Mill, Oregon Society of artists, the Celebration of Creativity in Beaverton, Keizer Art Association and the Salem Art Association. I am a member of the Watercolor Society of Oregon and have exhibited in their juried competitions.

I paint mainly in watercolor because it is an unending challenge. There are so many ways to paint in watercolor. Often you are surprised at what turns out because one does not always have control of the paint/water mix. I use a limited palette with 3-5 colors at most on any one painting. Watercolor painting is a long journey of learning.
